introduction

There are many things in life you should do before you die: getting out of the bedroom and having hot sex somewhere else is one of them. You remember your first, you remember your worst, and you should definitely remember some special moments in between.

There's a well-known story about Bob Eubanks, host of The Newlywed Game. He was said to have asked "What's the most unusual place you've ever made whoopee?" The contestant, according to legend, answered, "That'd be in the butt, Bob." We're fairly certain that's not what Bob meant.

For most of us, the bed is where it all begins: the fumbling, the nervous laughter, the exhilarating feeling that YOU ARE ACTUALLY HAVING SEX! WITH ANOTHER PERSON!! You've undoubtedly learned a thing or two in the sack since then, and you probably have a good idea what you like by now. It's time to take that prowess and confidence on the road, so to speak, and turn the page.

What's the most unusual place you've ever had sex? If you can't answer that, we've got some suggestions for you—101, to be exact. Some of the spots we've selected are hard to get to, some are dangerous, others are alluring precisely because you could get caught. Some promise to be watershed moments that you can share with your future grandkids (just kidding . . . but you and your mate will laugh about it for years to come—and maybe go back for another round). At the very least, they are terrific excuses to lure your partner to a new vacation spot or cultural event.

If you're in college reading this, you should be able to work your way through the list without too much difficulty. You're still flexible enough to fit into small spaces, and if you get caught, you can always chalk it up to "youthful indiscretions." If you're well into adulthood and have yet to take it beyond the bedroom, well . . . you'd better get started. One hundred one is a big list, and you've got a lot of other pressing issues in your life—mortgages, kids, work, no Viagra on hand. If you're over sixty-five, we bet you can check off any number of these places already. A recent study reports that today's senior citizens are more sexually active than ever. If you're collecting Social Security and reading this: God bless you.

A couple of pointers to help you get the most out of this book: we've provided a box to check off once you've successfully completed each location, a place to mark whether or not you'd venture there again, and space for commentary (we're sure you'll remember but it's a good reference point). And while technically you could complete two places with one encounter, say, by getting busy on The Kitchen Floor (18) while staying at your In-Laws' House over the Holidays (#51), why would you want to? It's not the endgame, it's the journey. (Also: yuck.)

Listen to your seventh-grade health teacher and use a condom. Also, use your head. Don't engage in any activity that is not suitable to your physical limitations or that you would find particularly uncomfortable or dangerous. Enjoy as many refreshing, rapturous, daring, and naughty places as you can—but be safe.

101 PLACES TO HAVE SEX BEFORE YOU DIE

8/5/08 12:17:48 PM

1

the beach

► Date accomplished: _____, 20____

► Place/Location: _____

► Repeat performance? Definitely/Maybe/Never again

► Supplies needed: towel, flashlight, tweezers

► Hazards: splinters, drowning, sharks

► Notes: _____

It's time honored, dare we say cliché. If you've actually had sex on the beach, you know the experience is less From Here to Eternity and more "How do I get this sand out of my butt crack?" But oh, the sound of the waves, the feel of the ocean lapping at your toes—we certainly understand the allure.

For those of you determined to live out those sand-and-surf fantasies, we suggest a less-itchy compromise: the deserted lifeguard stand. Let's be honest: at least one of you has daydreamed since adolescence about doing it with the lifeguard. (And if you actually have done it with the lifeguard, kudos to you. Let us know how you pulled that one off.) The stands are often made for two lifeguards to sit side by side, thus providing ample room for maneuvering. Climbing up there is half the fun, but bring a flashlight if the sun has set and you have only moonlight to guide you. A large towel should keep the action relatively sand free. Just know that should things get too wild up there, there is a risk that one of you might accidentally roll off. However, there is often a huge mound of sand in front for emergency landings, so your chances of survival are fairly high.

floating dock

► Date accomplished: _____, 20____

► Place/Location: _____

► Repeat performance? Definitely/Maybe/Never again

► Supplies needed: towel, tweezers

► Hazards: sunburn, splinters, drowning, cramps, alligators

► Notes: _____

We can't prove it, but we're pretty sure that floating docks were invented so horny camp counselors could get it on away from the prying eyes of their impressionable campers. Your summer-camp days may be long behind you, but if you've never done it on a floating dock, that bobbing pontoon still beckons. Other than the fact that you have to swim to get there, it's a pretty easy strategy, and if one of you can doggy-paddle with a towel wrapped around your head, so much the better. Floating docks rock . . . but they also give you splinters. Just don't touch the bottom (of the lake).

The first time you try a floating dock, stick to nighttime, when you are less likely to be spotted by passing swimmers. For advanced floating dock, try it in broad daylight. However, this calls for more creativity. One of you holds on to the ladder while the other has some underwater fun. Smile and wave as your oblivious friends water-ski nearby.

halloween party

► Date accomplished: _____, 20____

► Place/Location: _____

► Repeat performance? Definitely/Maybe/Never again

► Supplies needed: costumes, masks

► Hazards: overheating, wardrobe malfunction

► Notes: _____
