Acknowledgement

To my family: thank you all for your steadfast presence, through every misstep and faltering line. Your uncomfortable truths helped me become aware of my faults when I could not see them myself. Thanks for helping me find the voice to speak aloud, and listening to me reading a poem when silence felt safer.

To my friends: thank you for often being the first people to listen, even to verses scrawled in haste. Your opinions and constructive criticism gave my words new light. Thank you for your direct honesty when my steps turned reckless, and thank you for creating warmth in dark hours, and for proving that true friendship crosses every border.
