Small Momentums in an Extraordinary Life

Vergeten stappen in een kleurrijke wereld

Čestmir Bergsma

Special thanks to Pieter and all the strangers.

With that in mind I would like to thank my eight brothers for being there, especially Sascha and Jonathan who helped me with my stories. I will not forget the, always talking Andy, who sat with me in Amsterdam for six hours to make sure no English was harassed by making this book. Without them, you would now stare at a book filled with the Dutch way of making English sentences.

And at last, my friends, who came to me disguised as miracles, which they still are. I never quite understand how you can put up with me but who cares.

This book is about me, how I view the world.

Some say that I am not slower than the rest of the world. The rest of the world goes faster than it should. But if you need to take heed of every compliment I get, you can say that I am a wizard who is reborn with wisdom that scares the untrained. I can jump through walls and dwell endlessly as a child in your stories. I have the most amazing body odour and I do not hide behind words. I can change, as a shapeshifter, and be relaxed in all situations. Some even cry and say that I have a gift.

But, as I said, it is easier not to heed these kind of words.

Instead, I would like to give you the chance of finding out who I am by yourself.

Preface

Het mooiste aan leven is het ontdekken. Van liefde, vriendschap en meer woordenstromen dan je ooit zou kunnen ontleden.

I would like to take your hand, kiss your cheek and take you with me. Where? Wherever the fuck we want to go.
