GOODBYE

Years later, the day she lost her virginity, she felt she heard the door to a prison cell slam shut. Over the years there were three exes of those three, one she was almost married to, they were engaged he asked her, and she said yes shortly thereafter he died.

Is she punished by being used for being deflowered without first having a good husband and being married?

With her ex, every time she swallowed his excuses, she lost a piece of herself, with every excuse she swallowed, she lost a bit “and.” A piece of herself and her norms and values died.

Losing her virginity was not the way she wanted it she wanted to lose her virginity when she was fourteen when she was eighteen only later when she was married.

But things did not go completely according to plan Blair had always sex to maintain a relationship with a man going from one relationship to another is not the way God wanted it and it is not what she wanted.

She wants a long term relationship it is very important for her a real relationship means a lot to her she is a woman she is made for having a real relationship.

The sadness of the past it feels worthless miserable and it affects so many neurons in the brain that a woman is therefore more sensitive. Blair thought why the man does not understand that a woman is already so sensitive they should make it worse with their cheating they do not understand that their cheating makes us more sensitive. It is tragic that because of all her exes and especially because of what the latter has done, their cheating is that they have lost her faith in a man.

Her whole body mind soul and heart screams for a relationship that is forever permanent certainly too much to ask for she has emotional scars left by what her exes have done. For some women it is more than hard work to process all the painful fractures, all courage all the sexual courage she had evaporated. The moment she was cheated, lied to, put aside for someone else at the moment that she was just and only good enough for her body and was used.
