

How Syria won in the West

How Syria won in the West

Sonja van den Ende

PREFACE

How Syria won in the Netherlands - preface

- 1. How it started
- 2. The crimes
- 3. Eastern Aleppo the lies
- 4. Dutch media and politics supports terrorists writing fake news
- 5. The White Helmets
- 6. Who is Abu-Bakr-al-Bagdadi?
- 7. The Turkish game - Erdogan and NATO allies with IS
- 8. Who was the Syrian Mohammed Alloush, the celebrated anti-Assad rebel of the west?
- 9. Rami Abdul Rahman the only source of western Media SOHR
- 10. The role of Israel
- 11. Final and how it will continue

Writer: Sonja van den Ende

Coverdesign: Sonja van den Ende

© Sonja van den Ende

ISBN 9789402194678

How Syria won in the Netherlands

Foreword

Picture: The Hague 2016 Demonstration with Comité Syrian the Netherlands

Usually, I write my articles and books in Dutch, but because, of the importance of this, I will write it in English, so that my fellow activists/journalists, around the world, who, together, with me, struggled for more than seven years can also read it, to let the truth to be heard, finally we won in the Netherlands! It's all open in the regular MSM, who didn't want to hear from us and most important of all, the politicians have to admit, even Prime-minister Rutte, that he and his government, lost the war, they were illegally funding and fighting a war in Syria, a crime, against International Law to wage war on a Sovereign State, they will try to convince the public that under some circumstances, International Law will allow you to intervene, but these circumstances where not present in Syria! It was an ordinary proxy war for oil and power, they fought and killed many Syrian people, there is no excuse to be found, no geopolitical and no human excuse for this huge crime committed in the name of democracy!

Since more than seven years, we tried, to convince the public, regular MSM and politicians, that there was and is no revolution in Syria. But of course, the politicians, who were in power, the last 8 years, knew, but in their ignorance and hunger for power, they ignored us (only one or two who I can not mention here, saw the truth and tried to do something about it) and went to war on Syria, together with the US and other European countries, the main EU players were France and the UK, the other big power Germany, provided military material and opened the door for refugees, which turned out to be a catastrophe, among the real refugees (I mean real are the ones fleeing for the terrorists, which are still called rebels), where many jihadist, belonging to various terrorist groups, funded nearly all by EU countries and of course the US, Australia and New-Zealand, entered Europe!

Now the war is lost and Syria, with help of its allies Russia, Iran and Hezbollah has won the “war on terror” and life as I could see is slowly but surely returning to normal, many refugees, coming home, from Lebanon, but also from other countries in Europe.

Many lives were destroyed by the proxy-war, from in this case, the Netherlands, many civilians killed, soldiers killed, families who lost their sons, daughters and beloved ones. There were forced to flee their houses and left everything behind, all due to the terrorists who wanted to kill them and their family. Families destroyed and torn apart.

This book is about the struggle of Syrians in the Netherlands and Europe, activists, who fought for the truth for 8 years. I dedicate this book to those who fought for freedom, their courage, their losses, demonized by the regular media (MSM) and the loss of all their loved ones in this difficult battle. It is only the beginning of the revelation of all the “dirty secrets” that will come to the surface, little by little.

Syria, 2015, visiting the Ministry of Information, a meeting with the late minister Omran al-Zoubi (+) Comité Syrian, Sonja van den Ende, Willy van Damme (Belgium) en Paul van den Bavieré (Uitpers Belgium) (1) Foto: SANA

1 How it started

Much has been written and said about Syria, in the West the official version was: It's a civil war, because the Syrian people stood up against President Assad's government.

The Syrians, also Hezbollah, the Russians and others, have proved that there was no civil war, it was a war, waged and sponsored by the West, who, under the influence of the US, shouting the same mantra "remove dictator Assad" and thus allowing the support and destruction of Syria and the Middle East and therefore, indirectly being guilty of imperialism and geopolitical crimes, as a guideline for the US, which has been practicing these "regime-changes" since World War II.

Here are some facts and proof how it started:

The beginning

There was a terrible drought in the eastern part of Syria since 2010, so the people of Hasaka and Da'ara held spontaneous demonstrations to ask attention for this terrible drought, which made their harvests fail. Among the protesters were many members of the Muslim Brotherhood (now Al-Queda and ISIS) and other Islamist groups, they recognized their advantage in the situation and started a violent armed uprising by first killing soldiers and civilians. They said the government soldiers killed civilians and Assad was a terrible dictator.

2011 (according to the official western statement)

The city of Dara'a, near the Jordanian border, was the epicenter of the protests that was the start of anti-government sentiments and the scene of a violent terrorist uprising, the cause had grown due to a recent influx of expropriated and desperate families, by what an expert called "the worst long-term drought and most serious series of harvests since agricultural civilizations began in the Fertile Crescent many millennia ago".

What actually happened

President Assad attempted to calm down the situation by sending high government officials with family members in the city and by expressing sympathy and personal commitment to those responsible for this violent uprising. He fired the provincial governor and a general of the political security force, for their bad role, being unable to control violence.

President Assad also announced a number of national reforms. As summarized by an independent UN Commission of Inquiry into Syria, "These steps included the formation of a new government, the lifting of the state of emergency, the abolition of the Supreme State Security Court, the granting of a general amnesty and new rules on the right of citizens to participate in peaceful demonstrations. "

At the same time, however, according to another report, unknown shooters in Dara'a killed 19 Syrian soldiers.

The social media played a very bad role in the so-called uprising and claimed that there were many deaths, which was really out of proportion to the situation on the ground, again, the extremist Muslim Brothers and other Islamists who would later unite in Al-Queda and other Islamist groups benefited, on social media.

Picture: 2011: Protest in Dara'a, Facebook

Meanwhile, the protests had spread to other cities, fueled by social media campaigns and TV stations such as CNN, Al-Jazeera and the BBC. By the end of April 2011, government forces had, according to them, killed hundreds of protesters. Of which there is no evidence until now.

Another example: At the beginning of April of the same year, nine Syrian soldiers were raided and shot on the highway outside the city on their way to demonstrations in Banyas. Western media have suggested that they were killed by Syrian security forces for refusing to open fire on protesters, a fanciful story that was analyzed and demolished by Professor Joshua Landis, director of the Center for Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Oklahoma.