Entwined

Slowly she fed from the duvet and cleaned her mind with her angelic pleasures of rest.

Majestically letting her head relax upon her breast.

She spoke her words with poetic license and danced not moving within tears of joy.

Entwined near the warmth of mornings sprawling light.

They rested as lovers from the endeavors of playing the actors night.

Sweetness and perfume so enriched the peaceful room.

And sounds of nature's call echoed through windows slightly open as air fresh as a summer's broom.

The power of energy flagging from juices consumed and pleased beyond measure so entranced their lifelong bliss.

Arise good people and greet your journey with a look, or glance, and a kind enjoyment kiss.

And Angels Strolled

And angels strolled upon the holy lawn, dancing in the morning dew with their streamers of light and shade. Barefoot and carefree they twirled and spun within the bathe of mortal sunlight.

Praying their prayers and dreams into the fireflies' sight, as birds fluttered with colourful dancing songs. Whispering, the winds treasured words of courage and hope to sleeping souls. Silent beneath blankets of heaven's place. All was good upon this spiritual day. For peace had endured thus far and blessed her kisses this way.

The Flower

What are you blowing in the breeze, looking majestic in your surroundings beneath the trees.
Swaying to and fro with colours as radiant as wine,
for now, is your time to shine in grace with loving glow,
you display with your sisters in equal aplomb on show.
Can I hear you sing in the wind I feel you say,
as you also dance your tune on this cloudless dry soaked day, for you grow small but proud in soil so blessed with rain from yesterday's play.
Dream as you dance little flower, before your seeds take to flight
and thus, your little children to scatter abroad with garden, new to be gone and begin again in form and shape so hidden from sight.
