Fun activities: After each story, you'll find engaging games and activities that tie back to the story and reinforce letter recognition and vocabulary.

How to Use This Book

This book is designed to make learning letters a fun and flexible activity for young children. Here's how you can use it:

1. One Letter, One Adventure

Each chapter introduces a new letter of the alphabet, tied to an engaging Queenie story. Start with the first letter, or choose any letter your child is curious about. Read the story aloud, letting your child enjoy the adventure while hearing the sound of the letter in context.

2. Coloring and Writing Practice

After the story, guide your child through the coloring and writing activity. The coloring page lets them unleash their creativity, while the writing section helps them practice forming the letter.

Encourage them to trace the letter first and then try writing it on their own.

3. Fun Follow-Up Activities

Each chapter includes simple, playful activities that reinforce the letter of the day. These could be a scavenger hunt to find objects starting with the letter, singing a song, or drawing more pictures.

4. Bedtime or Daytime Learning

These stories are versatile! Use them as a calming bedtime story to wind down the day or as a focused learning activity during playtime. The fun narratives make the stories feel like a treat while subtly teaching valuable skills.

5. Encourage Storytelling and Imagination

After reading, ask open-ended questions about the story to spark conversations and encourage your child to imagine their own adventures. For example, "What other animals do you think Queenie might meet next time?"

By combining storytelling, hands-on activities, and plenty of creativity, Queenie's ABC's Adventure Stories ensures that learning the alphabet feels fun, exciting, and rewarding. Thank you for inviting Queenie into your home or classroom to make learning an adventure!

K is for Kangaroo!

Queenie and the Kangaroo in Australia adventure

“Pack your bag, Queenie!” said Sarah, holding up her map. “We’re flying all the way to Australia!”

“Woof!” barked Queenie. “You mean that large country with so many animals?”

“That’s right! K is for Kangaroo, Koalas, and Kindness. We’re off on an adventure!”

Sarah was going to visit her friends who were Flying Doctors; they fly in helicopters to help people who live far, far away in the big Australian outback.

Since Queenie was a small, clever little dog, she got to go, too! She sat by the window of the airplane with her ears perked up and her favorite stuffed bone in her lap.

When they arrived, Queenie couldn’t believe how big and wide Australia was! The sun was bright, the land was red and golden, and strange animals were hopping around.

That’s when she heard it

Queenie looked around and saw a tall, strong kangaroo making a clicking sound with her tongue. "Excuse me," Queenie asked politely, "Are you okay?"

The kangaroo blinked. "Oh! Hello. I'm Kandy the Kangaroo, and I've lost my baby, his name is Joey! He jumped out of my pouch, and now I can't find him anywhere."

Queenie tilted her head. "Is that what the clicking is for?"

"Yes," said Kandy, "Kangaroo moms make a clicking sound to call their babies when they're lost or far away."

Queenie's heart jumped. "Don't worry! I know just who can help."

She ran to find Sarah, who was talking with her Flying Doctor friends near their big helicopter.

"Woof!" Queenie barked. "We need a kangaroo rescue!" Sarah listened carefully, then nodded. "We'll find little Joey. Let's go, Flying Doctors!"

They soared over the red sand and green bushes, scanning the land from the sky.

Far across the bush, they spotted a group of tiny kangaroos bouncing around. And there, hopping the highest of all was Joey!

He was playing tag with his friends, laughing with hops and wiggles.

“Come on, little guy,” Sarah said as she gently scooped him up. “Your mama’s waiting!”

They flew Joey back to Kandy just as the sun began to set. She gave her baby a warm pouch-snuggle and a big kangaroo kiss.

“Oh, thank you!” said Kandy. “And thank you, Queenie, for helping me find my Joey.”

Queenie wagged her tail proudly. “K is for Kindness, Kangaroos, and Keeping families together!”

That night, under the stars, Queenie curled up next to Sarah and whispered, “What a kickin’ day in Australia!”
