This book is a work of poetry intended solely for literary and contemplative purposes. It is not intended to replace professional advice of any kind. The reflections contained herein are poetic interpretations of classical philosophies and should not be understood as prescriptions or specific recommendations.

For those who continued
without a reason
that could be named.

For those who stayed
when understanding did not arrive,
when nothing clarified,
when leaving would have been easier.

For those who remained
without certainty,
without instruction,
without a map.

For whoever is here —
not because it made sense,
but because they were.

PROLOGUE

Something asked
to be noticed.

Not as a message.
Not as a solution.

What follows is a record
of attention turning inward
and finding no center.

No conclusions were reached.
Only moments,
edges,
spaces where language
thinned.

These pages hold
what remained
when nothing resolved
and presence did not disappear.
