

Max & Mix 2

Dyslexia-friendly edition

Max & Mix 2

Dyslexia-friendly edition

Dee Jee

Author: Dee Jee

Cover design: Dee & Fary

ISBN: 9789403911410

© Dee Jee (First edition 2026)

Website: MaxAndMix.com

Facebook: Facebook.com/MaxMixBook

Music website: Music2.MaxAndMix.com

Book website: Book.MaxAndMix.com

Font used with the permission of DyslexicLogic.com

In this series:

- Max & Mix
- Max & Mix 2

Max & Mix is perfect for any reading moment and is available as:

- E-book
- Audiobook
- Hardcover
- Paperback
- Dyslexia-friendly edition
- English edition

Visit Book.MaxAndMix.com to find the edition that suits you best — at the best price.

Table of contents

1	Max, Mix, and the Lost Bunnies.....	7
2	Max, Mix, and the Blue Monster	14
3	Max and Mix go to School	21
4	Max and the Sore Tooth	30
5	Max, Mix and the Special Bird	37
6	Mix's Learning Time	44
7	The second Night Scavenger Hunt	51
8	Lily's Little Greenhouse	60
9	Max, Mix and the Frog	67
10	Winter Joys.....	75
11	Christmas in the Apple Tree	83
12	Bonus: The songs 2!	88

1 Max, Mix, and the Lost Bunnies

The sun shines brightly through the leaves of the big apple tree. Max carefully walks along a thick branch toward Mix's little house. Max and Mix are two young gnomes. They are best friends and live with their families in apple houses high up in the tree. Today they don't have school, so they can play together all day long.

"Good morning, Max!" Mix calls cheerfully.

"Good morning, Mix," Max says. "Ready for a new adventure?"

"I'm always ready," says Mix excitedly.

Together they slide down a branch and run through the grass to Lily's vegetable garden. Lily is a kind human girl who lives in the big house with her mom, dad, and cat Luna. The garden is full of delicious vegetables and fresh fruit.

"Shall we play hide-and-seek?" Max suggests.

"Yes," says Mix right away. "You hide first, and I'll count."

Mix turns around, covers his eyes with his hands, and counts out loud. "Ten... nine... eight..."

Max looks around to find a good hiding place. At the edge of the garden, he sees an upside-down flowerpot. It is small, but maybe just big enough. With all his strength, he lifts the flowerpot a little and crawls underneath. It is a great hiding spot!

"Zero! Here I come!" Mix calls.

He searches everywhere—by the cauliflower plants, under the endive leaves, and behind a big watering can—but Max is nowhere to be found.

"Hmm, where could Max be?" he mutters.

He walks a little farther toward the green meadow behind Lily's house. There, in the middle of the grass, he sees something moving. Two bunnies! They are calmly nibbling on the grass. Mix holds his breath. It is so exciting!

"Max needs to see this," he thinks. Because he still can't find Max, he turns around and runs back to the vegetable garden.

"Max! I give up!" he calls. "Come out, please."

“Here I am,” a hollow voice answers.

The sound comes from the flowerpot. Mix walks over and looks behind it.

“Where are you?” he asks.

“I’m hiding under here,” Max says.

Together they lift the flowerpot, and Max crawls out.

“I couldn’t find you,” says Mix, “but I did find something else: two bunnies! Come on!”

Hand in hand, they run to the meadow. The bunnies are still there, eating grass. They are young and fluffy, with cute ears and sweet little noses.

“Hello,” Max says softly.

The bunnies are startled for a moment, but they stay curiously in place. Then the light-brown bunny with a cute little tuft of fur says, “Hi.”

“I’m Max, and this is Mix,” Max says kindly.

“I’m Charlie,” says the bunny, “and this is my little sister, Angel.”

Angel smiles shyly. She has light-brown fur with gray spots and a cute, pointy nose.

“Where are you from?” Mix asks curiously.

“From Lily’s backyard,” says Charlie. “We dug a small tunnel under the fence, but now we don’t know how to get back.”

“Oh dear,” Max says. “Shall we help you?”

Together, they set off. They walk through the tall grass, past beautiful flowers and fluttering butterflies.

“Hey, look!” Mix suddenly calls. “Green clovers.”

Then he sees something special.

“A four-leaf clover!” he cheers. “That brings good luck.”

He spots two more and eagerly runs over to pick them.

Charlie sniffs another clover.

“And it’s really tasty too,” he says as he munches on a leaf.

Max and Mix pick some extra clovers for the bunnies to take home.

“There’s the fence!” Max calls. In the distance they see the tall fence of Lily’s backyard.

“Now we just have to find the tunnel,” Mix says.

They search along the fence—and there it is! Behind some leaves, they spot a small tunnel in the ground.

“That’s it!” Charlie says happily.

He crawls in first. Max gives the picked clovers to Angel, and she crawls into the tunnel too. On the other side of the fence, they pop up again.

They turn around and call, “Thank you, Max and Mix. You are true friends!”

“You’re welcome,” Max and Mix say happily.

They wave until the bunnies disappear among the garden flowers. Then they walk back to the apple tree.

“All that searching made me hungry,” Mix says.