Chapter 1

An Ordinary Day... Or Was It?

The sun shone brightly over the small town where Kiko and Mati lived. The streets were peaceful, and everything seemed perfectly ordinary—the kind of day that felt exactly like the one before.

But in their house, life was never quite that simple.

Out in the garden, Kiko was practising with a football. He raced from one end of the yard to the other as if he were playing in the final of an important championship.

"One day, I'm going to be the fastest kid in school!" he declared, slightly out of breath but grinning from ear to ear.

Kiko loved sports. Whenever he was running, kicking a ball, or playing a game, he felt confident and fearless.

Talking to new people, however...

That was a different story.

When he met someone he didn't know, he often became quiet and shy.

Inside the house, Mati was sitting at the kitchen table, completely absorbed in a colourful drawing covered with sketches, notes, and little diagrams.

Without even looking up, she called,

"Kiko! Slow down! You're going to smash Grandma's flowerpot!"

A moment later, Grandma walked into the kitchen carrying a basket of freshly baked gluten-free bread. Her warm smile filled the room before she even said a word.
