About the author:

Rita Khatchadorian, (born June 22, 1998) in Alexandroupoli (Greece) is a Belgian author and blogger of Armenian origin. Her father decided to use the invented surname Baberyan for personal reasons, but Khatchadorian has been her family's surname for centuries. She was raised as a Christian and grew up in the Armenian Apostolic Church. She speaks seven languages fluently. Most of her life, she went to private schools and got one of the best grades in school. She began to do art at the age of eight and continued up to this day. She found art in everything she loved. Writing songs, poems, and stories has been one of her hobbies since she was little. When she was little, she went to French schools and always wrote a Shakespeare story on a piece of paper and made her classmates the actors of the story. Shakespeare was one of her favorite writers of all time. She is currently studying at Middlesex University United Business Institute and will graduate this year. She graduated in criminology when she was 20. She has four more siblings at home and is the oldest of all children. "My hope in you" and "Touch of Heaven" are her first books that she published.

I dedicate this story to:

Give me three names of people that love you unconditionally... Are you sure? I've learned some hard lessons in this area and so has Ellen. Ellen, however, had (almost) lost her life to discover the truth. You may now wonder who Ellen is, Ellen is the main character in this book. I wrote this book as a result of personal life experiences and lessons I would be honoured to share with all of you. This book will make you laugh, cry, think, examine the motives of the people you call friends and I hope it will inspire you to appreciate people who love you.

TOUCH OF HEAVEN

Touch of Heaven is a story about Ellen, a 23-years-old Armenian woman living in Yerevan, who has just started working as a fashion designer. She grew up being very popular with lots of friends, and was almost engaged to the love of her life. Everything in her life seemed perfect until the day she got into an accident which left her in a coma. From that moment on, her soul has been wandering out of her body and she continuously lives in a world that is between death and life. Heaven would grant her one more chance to live, only if she could find three people who loved her deeply within their hearts without being blood related. Her being popular, and loved by so many people gets to know the real faces of the people she loved dearly. Will she be able to find those three souls? This is a story with plot twists, betrayal, jealousy, hate and backstabbing.
