

Copyright ©2021 A.T. Harkema All rights reserved.

No part of this publication may be reproduced, distributed or transmitted in any forms or by any means, including photocopying, recording, or other electronical or mechanical methods, without the prior written permission of the publisher , except in the case of brief quotations embodied in reviews and certain other non-commercial uses permitted by copyright law.

Forword

Here it is, the easy to read book you always wanted. Just one line per page. Every line however, how short it may be, contains some important lesson from history. Note that these are rules of experience not rules of law. At first I wanted to add some anecdote to illustrate the rule but in the end I decided not to. I figured the explanation could narrow things down too much and hinder you in thinking it through. This means you ran out of excuses not to reflect upon some of the important things in life: God, familie, honor, war, glory, defeat, love, peace, respect, resilience and so on. May the Almighty guide your thoughts and your ways, bless you and keep you.

Albert-J. Theodore

1. God always wins

2. it takes two to tango and three to make peace

3. a war never really ends

4. a withdrawal just changes the stage of the conflict

5. wars are expensive but no war could mean poverty

6. the best plan is not to have a plan