

Embracing the Void

thoughts, questions and rhymes on the human experience

Sacha Moens

Copyright © 2022 Sacha Moens All rights reserved

Published by: Sacha Moens

No part of this book may be reproduced, or stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, without express written permission of the publisher.

The contents of this book are creative utterances. The reader is solely responsible for the physical, mental and emotional reactions to this work. For the content is but meaningless words, letters and ink on paper.

Cover design: Sacha Moens

Every drop of ink,
loses meaning the moment it touches paper.
As every word becomes empty,
the moment it is spoken.

I want to cry,
but I don't know how.

My heart keeps bleeding,
and there are no patches left.

Life is but a symptom of the universe,
a way to store energy and information.

Divide reality into a million pieces,
and become whole again.

In how many ways can one cut an apple?
In the end, we eat the apple.