ABOUT

In the world of Mr. Withree, miracles never shout. They whisper, softly, in the folds of ordinary life. Each time someone makes a wish — no matter how small — a fragment of light is born into a magic marble. A trembling piece of possibility. Only Mr. Withree sees them.

He sees how a child's wish causes a drop of pure light to appear, floating, vibrating — and then gently dissolving into the invisible.

When a magic marble is lighting up, he knows a dream has come true. Not by magic spells or thunder, but by love, attention, and the quiet courage of living.

Most people never notice. They walk beneath skies that shimmer with uncounted fulfilled wishes, too busy to look up, too certain to be amazed.

And so Mr. Withree walks among them — a silent collector of light, a keeper of every small miracle that goes unseen. He does not seek to create more magic. He seeks only to remind the world that newer dreams may not yet come true, but old dreams are still fulfilled before their eyes daily, without them even seeing it.
