"It's pretty clear in the Fourth Turning that public distrust of all institutions is part of the crisis aspect of the turning we are in. The old institutional order needs to break down for a new one to be rebuilt. This means there will be no "revival" for either side of the political spectrum as it currently exists. Both sides must undergo a collapse or transformation for a new civic order to emerge. Both sides failing and losing public trust is baked into this era we are in. It's a necessary death before rebirth"

— Laura Matsue —
