Little Miss Muffet
sat on her tuffet
when along came
the itsy-bitsy spider.

“AAAH!”

Little Miss jumped and the spider ran.

and what are you doing up there?”
asked Little Boy Blue.

“I saw a sp-spider,”
stammered Little Miss.
“This big!”
