

"Hello, CoCo!" says Sirus Squirrel.
"Have any hazelnuts? I'm hungry!"
CoCo winks and she shakes
her branches. "For you, always!"
Several nuts fall to the ground.

Sirus Squirrel smiles, grateful for his most favorite tree friend.
In a forest filled with pine trees,
CoCo is the only tree who shares nuts.
She has Sirus Squirrel's great-grandfather to thank for that.

As Sirus Squirrel holds the hazelnut in his hand, he looks up at CoCo. He remembers the story of his great-grandfather burying a nut in the ground, and later forgetting all about it.

Together, CoCo and Sirus Squirrel remember how it grew. First, there were roots, and then it grew a trunk with branches and leaves . . .

"And now look how tall I am!" CoCo beams proudly.
