

White flakes twirl down from the sky. Suzy looks out the window. She wraps her thick scarf around her neck and rushes outside. "Yes! It's snowing!" she shouts. In the distance, Moose is already building a snowman.

Did you know?
Snowflakes
almost always have six sides?

“Can I help?” Suzy asks cheerfully.
“I could use a hand,” Moose nods.
“The second ball won’t stay in place.”

Together, the friends build a beautiful snowman.
Suzy wraps her warm scarf around the snowman’s neck, and Moose makes a face with pebbles.
“Now we need a carrot for the nose,” he says.

Did you know?
A male moose can have antlers up to 6 feet wide.
Females don't have any antlers at all.
